HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY, March 2.

Lord Dudley & Ward took the oaths and his seat. The Duke of Leinster took the oaths and his seat as Viscount Leinster.

Mr Hobart presented from the Commons the Norfolk poor bill, which was read a first time.

Lord George Cavendish presented a bill from the Commons, for enclosing certain common and waste lands in Yorkshire, which was read a first time.

Mr Moreton, from the East India House, presented several papers relative to the Presidency of Bengal, which were ordered to lie on the table.

ORDER OF THE DAY.

The order of the day being read for the House going into a Committee on the Regency bill,

The Lord Chancellor rose, and said, the accounts of his Majesty's health being every day more and more favourable, he should content himself with reminding their Lordships, that their late adjournments had been proposed on the principle of bringing the pressure of public affairs as gradually as possible under his Majesty's view, and therefore on the same principle he should move, "That the order of the day be adjourned to Thursday next."

This motion being agreed to, nem. dis. their Lordships at five o'clock, adjourned to Thursday next.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, March 2.

Richard Ford, Esq; took the oaths and his seat for East Grinstead.

Mr Barnard was sworn, and took his seat for Aylebury.

The Norfolk poor bill was read a third time, and passed. As was an inclosure bill for certain common lands in Yorkshire.

Several private reports were read, and petitions for private bills received.

ADJOURNMENT.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said, the late interruptions of public business, as they well knew, had been occasioned by the happy circumstance of his Majesty's recovery. In order, therefore, to allow as much time to confirm that recovery as the state of public affairs would admit, he meant to propose a short adjournment, to which he hoped there would be no objection; and therefore, with leave of the House, would move, That, at their rising, the House do adjourn to Thursday next.

This motion was agreed to, nem. dis. and the House, at half an hour after four, adjourned to Thursday next.

L O N D O N.—March 4.

It was thought necessary on Monday to bleed his Majesty; therefore the Royal message to Parliament was postponed, as well as his intended extirpation to Windsor.—Stuart's Star.

His Majesty is still improving in strength, as well as more settled and perfect in his intellect. Monday's bleeding, however, cannot be supposed to do him much good, as his blood is in a very impeded state. Bleeding, unless in the temples, ought by all means to be avoided, as it may bring on a dropsey.—Ibid.

This morning, the Prince of Wales and his brother, after breakfasting at Carlton-house, went together to Kew-palace.

The Archbishop of Canterbury visits the King at Kew by his Majesty's own appointment, but no private audiences are allowed.

The King is said to be particularly attached to Dr F. Willis, and his son Dr John Willis, since his restoration to health. This is given as the cause of their continuance at Kew, notwithstanding the other physicians are discharged.

This morning Drs Warren and Giborne went to Kew to visit the King. Dr Willis, however, unwilling, cannot dispense with the advice of the King's regular physicians, in order that the whole responsibility might not rest upon himself alone.

Yesterday morning his Majesty walked with the Princesses in Kew-garden; from thence he went into his stables to view his horses, and then to the new Poor-House at Richmond, which his Majesty inspected very minutely.

His Majesty has signified a wish to receive the sacrament before he appears in public; and it is imagined he will do so at St James's next Sunday.

In case bathing or the sea-air be thought advisable for his Majesty, the Prince of Wales has offered his pavilion at Brightelmstone.

The manly, yet forbearing conduct of the Prince of Wales, from the first appearance of his Royal character to the present hour, has been considered there to be a more popular man at present in Europe than his Royal Highness.

The six Commissioners from Ireland, together with the arrived. The company parted at ten, to sup at the French Ambassador's. In the centre of the table was a superb structure in confectionary, the prominent object of which was the Harp in a Glory, with the wreath Gloria Hiberniae, on the tablature, the Order of St Patrick, with its motto displayed in confectionary. Quis separabit, 1783, being the inscription of that Order.

Among other ornaments, were elegant embroidered blue satin flags, bearing the following inscription:—

Amidst the joys that flow from wine,
Let Friendship, with her voice divine,
The social band inspire:
When Albion and Hibernia greet,
And, warm with mutual wishes, meet;

Let Fame applaud the fire:
Whilst such with kindred friendship glow,

The union smiles at ev'ry foe.

A grand supper was given last night at the Duke of Cumberland's to the Irish Commissioners and many of the nobility.

Yesterday at noon, the Lord Chancellor, Mr Pitt, the Marquis of Carmarthen and Lord Sydney, went to Kew Palace, where they had a long conference with the King, and in the afternoon returned to town.

It was this morning asserted, that the Lord President of the Council meant to retire from all public business, as soon as the affairs of Government, now much deranged, are put into any kind of order. His successor is not yet known. Mr Pitt has been tendering the situation to a certain Marquis and his Grace of Grafton, whenever it shall become vacant.

Monday there was a meeting at the Duke of Argyle's, of the Noblemen and Gentlemen concerned in promoting and improving the Scotch fisheries, when they came to several resolutions, which his Grace afterwards communicated to the Minister, preparatory to an application to Parliament for leave to carry them into execution.

Sunday last, the Duke of Hamilton and Lord Deloraine visited Newgate, after which they attended divine service in the prison.

Yesterday two cart load of books in folio, manuscripts, on East India affairs, were lodged in Westminster Hall, preparatory to the trial of Mr Hastings.

A Court of East India Directors is summoned to meet on Friday next, when Captain Ley of the Barrington outward-bound East-Indian, for Coast and Bay, will attend and take leave of the Court, his ship being completely ready at Gravesend for sailing.

The General Goddard, Captain Foxall, and the Melville Castle, Captain Dundas, outward-bound East-Indian for Coast and Bay, sailed from Gravesend yesterday afternoon.

The General Goddard, Captain Foxall, and the Melville Castle, Captain Dundas, outward-bound East-Indian for Coast and Bay, sailed from Gravesend yesterday afternoon.

Monday, Dispatches were received at the India House, brought over in the Priape, a Dutch East Indian, arrived in the Channel. They contain an account of six English, four Danes, and four Imperial ships, all from Europe, being arrived at Bengal; and that the Swallow packet, Captain Anderson, reached the Cape of Good Hope on the 5th of November last, all well. The Prince sailed on her outward bound voyage the 24th of August 1787.

Monday night, the appeal of Mr Bowes against the judgment of the Ecclesiastical Court of Doctors Commons, in favour of Lady Strathmore, was finally heard before the Court of Delegates at Sessions Inn Hall, when their Lordships were pleased to affirm the judgment without hearing the counsel in behalf of Lady Strathmore, whereby her Ladyship is re-established in the possession of all her estates.

COURT OF CHANCERY.

STRATHMORE v. BOWES.

Yesterday the rehearing of the cause between Lady Strathmore and Mr Bowes respecting the right of her Ladyship to the possession of her estates, which she had made over to herself and children, a few days prior to her marriage with Mr Bowes, came on before the Chancellor, at Lincoln's Inn Hall.

After Mr King, Counsel for Lady Strathmore, had spoke in support of the former decree, made by Mr Justice Buller, the Lord Chancellor pronounced judgment. His Lordship said, the question was, Whether a deed of settlement, dated 10th January 1773, executed by Lady Strathmore, with a view to a marriage with Mr Gray, and which existed, unknown to Mr Bowes, on the day he married her Ladyship, was void upon the principle of fraud? His Lordship said, there was no pretence to say that this deed was intended as a fraud on Mr Gray, because it was framed with his concurrence; nor could it be deemed fraudulent with respect to Bowes, who had married her Ladyship without any previous treaty, but in a very precipitate and extraordinary manner.

On the morality of the cause, his Lordship said, he should make no observations; in this respect the parties appeared to stand upon an equality. Lady Strathmore's object appeared to be marriage in general, without any reflection as to the character of the man who offered himself to her choice. She had, however, by this deed, entertained a thought of taking care of her estates. This was a lucid interval, and if there was any reason in madness, His Lordship conceived, that this deed was a spark of understanding. His Lordship then said, he had not the least doubt upon the cause. The deed in question was, beyond all controversy, a valid and subsisting instrument, and under which Lady Strathmore had a right to her estates. His Lordship therefore ordered the decree of Mr Justice Buller to be affirmed.

The sentence of divorce pronounced, was in substance as follows:

"That Andrew Robinson Bowes, being unmindful of his conjugal vow, and not having the fear of God before his eyes, did, on the several days and times mentioned in the pleadings of this cause, commit the heinous crime of adultery.

"The Court do therefore order and decree, that the said Andrew Robinson Bowes and Lady Strathmore be divorced, and live separate from each other; but that neither of the parties marry during the natural life of the other of them."

The following important advice was received officially on Monday night from Brussels. The public may rely on its authenticity:—

Orders have been issued by the Government of Brussels to the Chevalier de Celles, High Sheriff of that place, and one of the principal Magistrates, to prepare instantly barracks for some French troops, which may be expected daily. He is at the same time nominated Commissary of the Barracks.

The dispatch likewise adds, that another body of French forces is expected to march into Flanders, and that they will possess themselves of the garrisons of Ostend and Newport.

This will be done with the consent of the Emperor.

A considerable part of the character of the present high Admiral of the Turks may be discovered from two extraordinary circumstances. When some Janissaries were not sufficiently active in extinguishing the flames of a fire, he ordered four of the most negligent to be thrown into it: a dreadfully effectual method (to use the words of Voltaire, upon another occasion) pour encourager les autres. He is, frequently, accompanied by a lion, who follows him like a dog, and, not long since, entered with him into the Divan, the affrighted Members of which fled, with the utmost precipitation, leaving the high Admiral, and his strange companion, to settle the Councils of the day together.

Extract of a letter from Vienna, Feb. 9.

"The Emperor, who had been confined to his chamber by a fresh indisposition, is now perfectly restored to health. It is confirmed that the Sovereign is to set out for Bohemia the 20th instant, and return to this capital about the 6th of next month. Warlike preparations are continued with great vigour, and all hopes of peace are at an end. It is expected they will become more general next campaign."
